Bank Clearings Compared.

Compared with the abnormally large bank clearings of a year ago, the Salt Lake clearings last week again showed a heavy decrease. The week's clearings a year ago were $4,869,549, which is $1,780,638 more than the aggregate for the past week. While the volume of business is now gratifying to the commercial interests of the city, it is easy to account for the apparent shrinkage in comparison with this time last year, when there was greater activity in the mining stock market.
